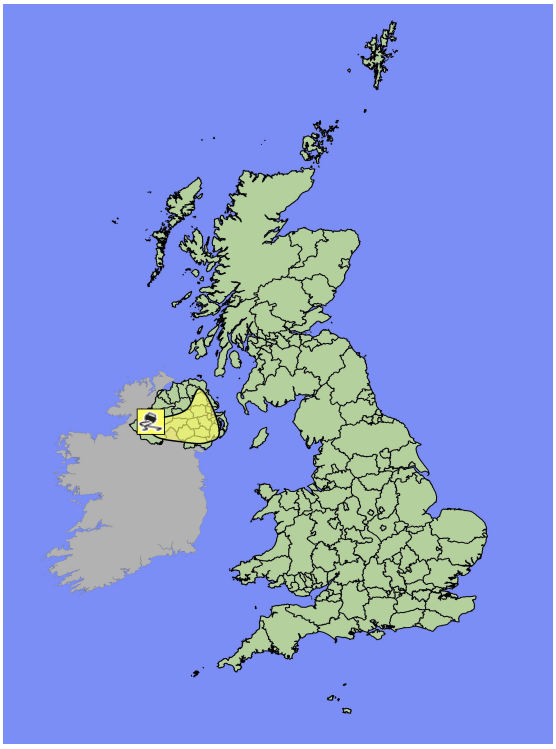
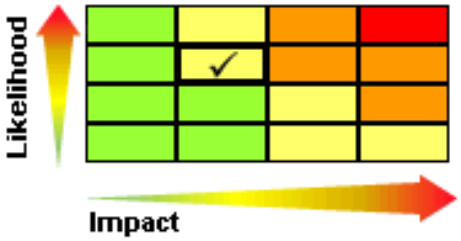
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Heavy showers, wintry in places, will alternate with clear spells tonight, posing the risk of some icy surfaces to start Sunday, although not all regions will be affected.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 02:00 on Sun, 30th Dec 2012 until 10:00 on Sun, 30th Dec 2012

Icy stretches are likely to affect some roads overnight and into Sunday morning, especially where heavier showers have washed off earlier applications of grit. In addition some of the showers will be wintry over high level routes with slight accumulations of snow possible above 300 m.

The public should be aware of possible difficult travel conditions.
